Lyrics by Shari Ulrich

Every Road

Maybe you're feeling it coming
Maybe it's nothing at all
Sometimes change comes and picks you up
Just when you start to fall

Sometimes it's too familiar
And you've just gotta run
Or you can't find what you think you need
To do what must be done

*But wherever you run
Wherever you roam
Every road is leading you home
Whatever may come
Whatever the load
Every road
Every road leads home*

All those years of choices
Carry my pride and my shame
And there is something lost
For every freedom gained

Some days lie before you
Like a battle to be won
Or you can't find what you think you need
To do what must be done

*But wherever you run
Wherever you roam
Every road is leading you home
Whatever may come
Whatever the load
Every road
Every road leads home*

You've been up all night
Don't know what to do
Searching the walls for clues
You might hear that voice all of your life
"If only I!"

*Wherever you run
Wherever you roam
Every road is leading you home
Whatever may come
Whatever the load
Every road
Every road leads home
Every road is leading you home
Whatever may come
Whatever the load
Every road
